Transverse section of ovary of a wild mallow flower was sliced and observed under foldscope.

The ovules with their outer integuments were clearly visible. The inner parenchymatous portion of the ovule was really amazing.
The ovary wall was seen to have presence of protective hair on the outside.