Feathery stigma of the grass - Coix lacryma-jobi under foldscope

AJAY PRAKASH

Coix is a gras which bears bead-like structures, which are green when young and become black, grey to ivory coloured on maturing. The stigma of Coix is trifid, coloured and feathery. The stigma was detached and fixed on a slide to observe through a foldscope. It appeared like numerous multicellular trichomes emerging from the stigma.